...discover some Sea Captain Houses

Whaling Captain Edward Penniman built a French Second Empire style estate. He has one of the most successful whaling stories; at 11 years old in 1842 he signed on as a cook in a schooner. Years later as a Captain he set sail from New Bedford 7 times to hunt whales. The trips generally took several years. Letters indicate he did not like life at sea, but the money allowed him to afford a large ornate house which overlooks Fort Hill among the Capes most scenic areas

www.easthamhistorical.org

Atwood House in Chatham built circa 1792 by sea Captain Joseph Atwood was occupied by his descendants for some five generations. This traditional Cape Cod style cottage offers a rare look at life, art & furnishings during this period, which never had running water or electricity (508.945.2493) www.chathamhistoricalsociety.org

Captain Bangs Hallet House is a fine example of Greek revival, originally a store and rebuilt in 1840's. First owned by Captain Allen Hinckley Knowles during the heyday of maritime commerce. As he prospered in the clipper trade both his family and fortune grew, and needed a larger home. At the same time his good friend Captain Hallet saw a decline in his fortune. So in 1863 the two captains negotiated a deal, sold their homes to each and swapped residences. (508.362.3021) www.hsoy.org
